

RIESLING

“The Art of Vines”

This fine, fruity Riesling has a well balanced palate and a touch of exotic fruit. It is very crisp, refreshing and straightforward. It goes well with salads and Asian cuisine. Of course, it can be enjoyed on its own as a quaffing wine or aperitif.

The Ars Vitis label is designed by artist and wine grower Heinz Ames, who paints watercolors with wine. The wine he uses is Riesling, which grows on the steep slopes of Germany’s Mosel Valley. The Mosel Valley is also the theme of his paintings.

RIESLING

“The Art of Vines”

This fine, fruity Riesling has a well balanced palate and a touch of exotic fruit. It is very crisp, refreshing and straightforward. It goes well with salads and Asian cuisine. Of course, it can be enjoyed on its own as a quaffing wine or aperitif.

The Ars Vitis label is designed by artist and wine grower Heinz Ames, who paints watercolors with wine. The wine he uses is Riesling, which grows on the steep slopes of Germany’s Mosel Valley. The Mosel Valley is also the theme of his paintings.

RIESLING

“The Art of Vines”

This fine, fruity Riesling has a well balanced palate and a touch of exotic fruit. It is very crisp, refreshing and straightforward. It goes well with salads and Asian cuisine. Of course, it can be enjoyed on its own as a quaffing wine or aperitif.

The Ars Vitis label is designed by artist and wine grower Heinz Ames, who paints watercolors with wine. The wine he uses is Riesling, which grows on the steep slopes of Germany’s Mosel Valley. The Mosel Valley is also the theme of his paintings.

RIESLING

“The Art of Vines”

This fine, fruity Riesling has a well balanced palate and a touch of exotic fruit. It is very crisp, refreshing and straightforward. It goes well with salads and Asian cuisine. Of course, it can be enjoyed on its own as a quaffing wine or aperitif.

The Ars Vitis label is designed by artist and wine grower Heinz Ames, who paints watercolors with wine. The wine he uses is Riesling, which grows on the steep slopes of Germany’s Mosel Valley. The Mosel Valley is also the theme of his paintings.

RIESLING

“The Art of Vines”

This fine, fruity Riesling has a well balanced palate and a touch of exotic fruit. It is very crisp, refreshing and straightforward. It goes well with salads and Asian cuisine. Of course, it can be enjoyed on its own as a quaffing wine or aperitif.

The Ars Vitis label is designed by artist and wine grower Heinz Ames, who paints watercolors with wine. The wine he uses is Riesling, which grows on the steep slopes of Germany’s Mosel Valley. The Mosel Valley is also the theme of his paintings.